Art Rejections:

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hendrick et al, U.S. pat. Appl. Pub. No. 2004/0006541, in view of Headings et al, U.S. pat. No. 6,925,469.

Per claims 1-2, 4 and 6, Hendrick discloses an information providing system, comprising:

a) an information providing apparatus (101, 106) for providing copyrighted program or information content via a network (see Hendrick in page 2, par. 18-19); and

b) an information reproducing apparatus (103, 104, 108) which can have access to the information providing apparatus via the network, has an information reproducing device for reproducing copyrighted program transmitted via network or recorded on a recording medium (page 4, par. 42), and transmits identification information corresponding to the program via the network to the information providing apparatus in order to request related information including advertisement information related the program or the accompanied information when the copyrighted program is reproduced (see page 4, par. 45, 48);

wherein the information providing apparatus also comprises:

- c) an identification information receiving device which receives via the network the identification information transmitted from the information reproducing apparatus (page 5, par. 55);
- d) a related information acquiring device which acquires the related information based on the received identification information (page 5, par. 58);
- e) a related information providing device (e.g., authorized content provider or right holder source) which provides the related information via the network to the information reproducing apparatus (see Hendrick in page 5, par. 58).

Hendrick does not teach computing payment (royalty) to be paid to the right holder source for use of its copyrighted program or content information. Headings discloses a content distribution system that includes means for computing and transmitting payment to content owner/provider (see Headings in col 11, line 56 - col 12, line 29).

Art Unit: 2154

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize such payment management in Hendrick because it would have enabled distributing program or content information from a third party (see Hendrick in page 5, par. 58).

Per claim 3, Headings teaches offering different prices or packages for programs and content information including advertisement supported package (see Headings in col 13, lines 25-35). It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to recognize that a program with advertisement would have been paid less than a program without advertisement.

Per claim 5, Headings teaches monitoring consumer's usage of programs or content for computing payment for content owner/provider (see Headings in col 11, line 56 - col 12, line 29).

Claims 6-9 are similar in scope as that of claims 1-5.
